Kindly move the fuck out of [REDACTED] before more bombs go off, please. Don't make me draw a cartoon of Muhammad.

To: [REDACTED]

I am sorry for sending a message that you interpreted as being violent against you. I was merely addressing the unfortunate fact that violence is associated with Islam, and that makes me very afraid. I know, however, that there are peaceful Muslims, and I'm sorry for insulting a peaceful group. I can't do anything about major problems in the world at this point in my life, and that makes me angry, so sometimes I feel the need to let out my anger by insulting people. I assure you without a shadow of a doubt that I feel bad for making you afraid. The message that I sent was intended to be directed towards people who hate Americans and all their freedoms. Clearly you want peace just as much as I do, and that makes me shameful for sending that message. I am not, and have never been, a dangerous person, I just have mild anger issues, and I swear that I will do whatever it takes to get those issues under control so I don't make the mistake of insulting the wrong people ever again.
